The Country Weekly Newspaper

"What do you think of the future of country newspapers?" This question was asked Mr. Wright A. Patterson by a teacher from one of the Western Canadian teacher training universities in the course of a conversation in which the successful efforts of big city dailies and periodicals to increase circulation in rural sections was noted, and the editorial content of these publications discussed. In answer, Mr. Patterson painted a picture of the future as seen it.

Admitting that there is a place for the small weekly newspaper—and this is, and will be more especially so on the prairies of Western Canada—the important question is: How is that position to be maintained, improved, developed; and are our Western Canadian editors alive to the situation and endeavoring to meet it? If they are, they will undoubtedly receive the public support they will so well deserve.

Both Mr. Patterson's words and his picture of the reading public will be interesting to Mr. Patterson's Auxiliary. While a bit too lengthy for complete reproduction in this column, except maybe given:

"There has been, within the last quarter of a century, a radical change in the people of the rural communities—the people of the towns and on the farms. Up to the time of the First World War, the people were concentrated, the people seldom got beyond their local market place. It was a day's task for the farmer and his family to get as far away from home as the nearest town, possibly not more than three or four miles away. The only form of conveyance was the farm wagon, or the horse and buggy. The roads were narrow stretches of dirt that turned pockmarked by the passage of many teams. Not one year in ten did the most modest of the rural people—the people of the towns and farms—get beyond their municipal lines. It was the exceptional rural family whose children went away to school. The students at universities were largely from the cities and the number attending universities was small as compared to the present time."

"Under such conditions the horizon of the rural family was extremely limited. Its members had practically no contact with the outside world and quite naturally the interests of these rural people centred about themselves and their neighbors.

"The country newspaper that catered to that local interest, that reported events in which the people of each community played a part, was satisfactory to the people of these communities. To the local news coverage, many editors added some general news and entertainment material and made for that time a satisfying newspaper that met very rural reader demand."

"Today conditions are radically different. The automobile and good roads have made travel possible. The day's trip now is to the city anywhere from 50 to 300 miles distant from the rural home. The World War took tens of thousands of the boys of the farm into distant training camps and associated them with boys from every section of the nation, and with every class. It sent them across the ocean into far distant lands. It widened their horizon to include practically the entire world and all classes of society. It brought them into contact with the new industrial and political interests. That was 18 and 20 years ago. The farm and town boys of the World War days are now the men, the heads of families of the rural community of these days."

"The radio has brought the world to the rural community fireside. It has widened the view of the people of these communities until it includes all countries, all classes, England, France, Germany, Japan, Australia and every known point in the world.

"Go to the universities to-day and a large percentage of the students are from the towns and the farms. These young people are acquiring for them selves and taking back to the rural homes from which they come, an increased interest in national and world affairs, in history in the making, in the arts and sciences and in international politics."

"As a class the rural audience of to-day is a more intelligent audience than that of the city. The people of the towns and farms have to-day a wider interest than the average individual of the city. They are in no sense provincial."

To the rural audience the country newspaper of today and tomorrow must appeal to it if it is to live. It must bring to them intelligent interpretations of what is happening throughout the world because it is to-day a world, and they know that its happenings may directly concern themselves. The cotton farmers of the Southern States know that happenings in far-away Japan affect the market prices they get for their cotton. They know that should war come between Japan and Russia, the regulation of the water of the Blue Nile and to affect the cotton crop of the Egyptian Sudan and create a larger demand and higher price for American cotton their cotton. The wheat farmers of Western Canada know that drought in Russia, in Argentina, in France or many other sections of the world would certainly raise the price they would get for their wheat."

"The people of the towns and farms insist upon keeping in touch with those national and world affairs that have a direct bearing on their lives. They expect the newspaper they buy to bring to them interpretations of such happenings. They do not want rumors and surmises, but they do want statements of facts, of what such facts mean. They will buy the newspaper that gives them such information."

Weekly newspaper editors are awakening to these new conditions. They are realizing that it is quality not quantity of reading matter that is demanded, and that the demand can be met in the limited space of eight to 10 or 12-page papers, giving them room to cover the community happenings and with them the international events in the nation and the world, and a reasonable amount of entertainment.

For the paper that does these things there is a future. Such a paper will cover all of the to-day's national and world interests of its readers and will make itself so meet the newspaper needs as to leave no necessary place for a paper from the outside. For such a paper there is a future, greater than the past, and the majority of the editors of country newspapers are awake to the things. The minority that are not, or do not awaken will, in time, pass out of the picture.

Forgetful Time On

L. F. Loring, president D. & H. says: "When you look over the popularity of the bicycle to popularity. It may be due to the fact that we followed the old fashioned way of working like the Indians until they got where they wanted to get, people who forgot about time off."

One Explanation

Some surprise is expressed by an American sports journal at the recent success of the bicycle to popularity. It may be due to the fact that we followed the old fashioned way of working like the Indians until they got where they wanted to get, people who forgot about time off."

Reclamation Work

Applications From Farmers Keep Pouring In, and Work Progresses
Mr. E. S. Archibald, director of reclamation, received a report from Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of experimental farms and chairman of the advisory committee which has the reclamation work in hand. The report indicated active co-operation from the western farmers to the undertaking.

Up to date 80 townships in drought-frequent areas have joined the community effort by which each farmer, agent, and representative of departmental experts in cropping their lands, sowing grasses and in other ways co-operate to protect the country from soil drifting and other disasters.

Applications for engineering and other assistance in the construction of water conservations are being received. This assistance is asked for in the form of dug-outs, small earthen reservoirs, irrigation, diversion dams for farm and range, for acre crop production, flood schemes and pumping schemes. "They are pouring into the department at the rate of 60 to 100 a day," the report said.

"On July 5, there were 102 applications from groups of farmers asking for assistance in dugouts and small watering dams, averaging 25 farms per application. There were 100 more for other applications from individual farmers.

"Over 70 applications have been received and a certain amount of engineering investigating already done on many of these cases. The company is continuing to do domestic use, irrigation or animal in transit water supply," the report said.

"We expect those which have not yet been found feasible by the engineer will be Wild Horse project, White Mud project, Souris dam, Crystal City dam and others.

"An engineering staff consisting of one senior engineer and one junior engineer has reported for duty and they to the co-operation of the Dominion hydroelectric service, which has supplied necessary instruments, are busily engaged field engineering work. Reports with recommendations are coming in from these engineers rapidly."

New Form Of Flight

Man In Florida Has Wings

The idea of strapping "wings" on a man was elaborated in some detail by Leonardo da Vinci. At the Science Museum in South Kensington there is the original "Ornithopter" designed by Frost in 1803. It is a design which has never been built.

Plans now that a new form of flight has been made practicable by Clem Sohn, known as the "human bat" who only recently flew over Daytona Beach, Florida, with "wings" of his own attached to his arms and feet.

The earliest dreamers who sighed for the wings of a dove could have done the same if only they had had some means of alighting safely. The parasite of the human arm has been thrown from an airplane at a suitable height he has only to fall 1,000 feet to gather a speed of 100 to 150 m.p.h. At this speed he can glide bank, turn, or execute any maneuver.

Old Game Revived

Chinese Again Playing Polo After Lapse Of 300 Years

For the first time in 300 years two Chinese teams recently galloped about a polo field. The historic occasion was part of the athletic meeting of General Chang Chia Ching's army held in the town of the notorious bandit Kao Lin.

Although the Chinese were playing polo 1,000 years ago, the game was allowed to lapse and was not revived until inspiration was furnished by Lt. Henry J. Morgan, King's Royal Rifle Corps and World War hero of Samoan cavalry. He is stationed at Peiping for the study of the Chinese language.

Delegates Entertained

At the annual convention of the Saskatchewan Rural Municipal Secretaries-Treasurers, the delegates and wives were entertained at a theatre party given by the Central Press Limited, Regina, and greatly enjoyed the picture "In Caliente" shown at the Capitol theatre.

Pretty Wife (on stand in divorce court): "Was the old story, a horse and a jackson can never agree."

Husband (nearing, as he shook off the restraining hand of his attorney): "Safety with the thrill of rounding a curve on two wheels."

Donaldson Atlantic Line

Change Of Name Announced By Agents

Donaldson Atlantic Line is the new name for the former Anchor Donaldson Lines, which was owned by Standard White Star Limited, who are their agents in Canada and the United States.

"The change of name follows the return of the Canadian Section to passenger traffic to compete control by the Donaldson interests which originally promoted it," stated George D. Huband, deputy chief Canadian representative of Cunard White Star, in an interview at Montreal.

The Donaldson Line itself commenced its Canadian operations in 1920 and has since maintained control of its Canadian operations in service to Canada and its home port of Glasgow. Its growth has also been marked by the acquisition of the old Allan Line service to South America, the development of the Montreal-Bristol Channel trade and the service from Vancouver to Great Britain."

Empire Trade Agreements

New Deal With Canada Desired By Australian Premier

A new trade agreement with Canada embodying additional features is desired by Australia, Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons of that Dominion said in a speech to the Canadian House of Commons.

The empire trade agreements negotiated in 1932 had proved satisfactory and brought about an increase in trade. Australia had been instrumental in the revision of the present treaty in the light of experience which would accomplish this. While it was true Canadian exports to Australia had increased more rapidly than Australian exports to Canada, Australia had no grievance and did not consider it had got the worst of the bargain.

"Walk straight on the road to town and see a path leading into the woods. It's a narrow trail, and I ain't attempted it for years, though Tubs and I got engaged to be married up there under the old pine. You'll find our initials cut in the bark of the tree just above the trail. Tubs is a real good carver. If you run into anybody from the Adam ranch, Nancy, tell 'em we'll want extra milk to-morrow. And would you mind peekin' in the bed room window and see if Tubs is still sleeping? He's got a dilation stomach, and his supper didn't set good last night."

Suppressing a smile at this unique request, Nancy promised, and started on her walk. She was nervous all the way, and it was impossible not to feel a thrill at this unbelievable December day. The sun was warm; yet the air was crisp. She could smell the fragrance in New England, it seemed incredible; and next week Nancy mused regretfully, the County Club would be gay with winter sports. "I wouldn't be there anyway," she said to herself. But the memory of the mess she had supposed vanquished, raised her head again. "It's bad at Edgemere wiping dishes for Mother, or mopping up puddles of snow brought in by Phyllis. Here's the truth, though; already, I must see if Victoria is asleep."

This brought a smile, and home-sickness retired to that place where such things go so we forget ourselves. Aurora's house, which set back a mile from the trail, was a one-story affair covered with tree bark, and almost hidden in a grove of stunted pines. Nancy went softly up the path and peered in at a window. By pressing her face against the glass she made out to discern two figures, and with the apprehensive Tubs was snoring peacefully; while one of his wife's rich lay cakes and an open jackknife stood on a nearby chair.

Thinking of Victor's "delicate stomach," the girl chuckled as she turned away. No wonder his supper failed to digest! Should she tell him? Nancy decided against this, however, when Cousin Columbine showed her the story. It was too good to keep.

She still smiled as she resumed her walk; but that path into the woods seemed to elude her. Concluding that she had missed him since his hasty exit after conferring with Aurora, Nancy continued walking now, the girl observed, and wondered if it were the same blushing, or a new one for her especial benefit?

She said, as a shy smile hovered near her face, "I'm thinking here—'Sorry to make you stop if I'm in a hurry, but Aurora wants more milk to-morrow. And will you show me how I can reach that hill? I've lost my way!"

As the girl said lightly from the trees, ready to stand beside her, Nancy was again impressed with the young man's appearance. His blush had subsidied; but something told her that he was struggling with embarrassment and furrowed with himself because of it.

"You should have turned off just after you passed Aurora's," he said. "I'm afraid you might miss the trail, so let go up a ways. It's an easier climb from the other side. If—if you don't mind riding on the truck I'll take you 'round."

He was laughing again, and right the moment he had forced himself to make the offer out of politeness, and thus responded: "Aren't you too busy?"

"Not busy at all; but this truck is a second cousin to Methuselah. We'll get there in time for the last load in foolishness. What's she found to pick at about you?"

"Stockings?" said Nancy, and wondered if Matt followed close behind the narrow path, was blushing.

"My spool holder got left at home, and I've never been without a pair of Cousin Columbine's 'black cottons.' Honestly, I didn't even know I had them."

"They're growing scarce in the firs," said Matthew gravely. "There's a Pine Ridge that's not much call for 'em; and the high lace book is doomed."

"I'm not surprised about that. This was the strongest young man I ever came across. One moment he was stammered with confusion, and the next was saying something as amazing as that it was unexpected. Their eyes met, turned, and they both laughed, and laughing, felt better acquainted.

"I wonder," remarked the girl as she started forward, "where Cousin Columbine gets her?"

"You mean her?"

Nancy nodded because the trail was steeper here, and she found herself a little short of breath.

"Maybe she gets 'em where she gets the middies," suggested Matthew. "Slow down, Miss—er—er..."

"Not 'er Vietnamese," said Nancy, without turning. "Was I going to fast?"

"To fast for the top of that hill? Well, it's probably good, at this altitude. It takes time to get accustomed when you've been up a poor, eroded, ruined trail?"

"Not yet; and he's pretty worried. Oh, just look at the peak! And—why he never imagined such a view before! I mean, there was anything like it in the world!"

Matt beamed, as pleased with his enthusiasm as if he were responsible for the view himself.

"I wonder if the builder's thought he'd be in, longing, sometimes wing back to this hope which came to him?"

"Once I built, so dear, I yearn for vista clouds-brushed, sun-wet, vast!"

Who knows? Perhaps I shall return those forsaken crests at last!

A 20-Nov.-old jobless farmhand from Nova Scotia has a bit of advice to pass on to ambitious young Canadians who are unemployed and desire to keep up their morale and interest in themselves to give advice, so I can away."

Matthew laughed softly. It was a pleasant laugh and his voice was pleasant too, though Nancy, when he forgot himself and spoke naturally, was a bit taken aback.

"Aurora Tubbs strikes me completely dumb," he told her; "and advised is one of her strong points. I'm not from the country, but the last word in foolishness. What's she found to pick at about you?"

"Stockings?" said Nancy, and wondered if Matt followed close behind the narrow path, was blushing.

Malayans Like Bagpipes And Have Learned To Play Them

The Malayans like the bagpipes and they play them as well. It is the instrument of choice among immigrants who introduced them to their culture, but also the Johore military forces have given their first public performance—and it was a great success.

BANK OF MONTREAL CROP REPORT

Ontario the warm weather of the past week has been beneficial and crops generally have been making good progress. Most of the grain in southern areas are drier than usual. In British Columbia the prevailing hot weather has helped the crops and in most districts moisture conditions are satisfactory.

Alberta—Crops generally have improved to record breaking. In Central and northern areas practically all the wheat is in head as also are some coarse grains. In southern areas now in the ground are poor and rather dry due to recent rain and rather dry soil. Some beans are making good progress.

Saskatchewan—Wheat is heading rapidly in the central areas where drought has caused irreparable damage a fair to heavy stand is indicated. Coarse grains show satisfactory progress. Rust is prevalent in southern and eastern areas and especially in the small and grasshoppers in some sections.

Manitoba—Rust infection has spread extensively in central and southern areas and serious damage to wheat crop is evident. Coarse grains continue to develop although barley and oat crops show signs of head in some sections. Moisture is ample.

TO DEVELOP A NATION'S RESOURCES

In 1842, following the union of Upper and Lower Canada, when the Bank opened a branch at Toronto to success the agency there, and established offices in nine other cities of Upper Canada, the Honourable Peter McGill, then president of the Bank, explained why the directors had opened upon so many of its branches or agencies in the then western portion:

"The Legislature acting upon the Bank important principles, which directed the development and expansion of a large capital, the Board, instead of concentrating it all in the large cities, felt it to be their duty gradually to extend throughout the province the benefits derivable from the use of it by the establishment of branches and agencies at such points and in such localities as appeared to them best calculated to encourage and assist the agriculture and commerce of the country, to develop its resources, and to promote the increase of its exportable production..."

Even before the union of Upper and Lower Canada, the Bank sought constantly to encourage these factors in the west, which would contribute effectively to the up-building of the large cities, felt it to be their duty gradually to extend today as ever.

the matter of state control and marketing, wheat will be Canada's gravest cause of supply by far exceeds the demand.

It is estimated, as this is written, that we will have a 400,000,000 bushel crop this year.

Add a minimum carryover of 200,000,000 bushels—it may be more. Subtract 100,000,000 for domestic consumption, net.

The result is 500,000,000 bushels to be sold to other countries.

The Canadian Bureau of Statistics correspondents in Argentina estimated in June 3rd that with its current consumption of 150,000,000 bushels, that country had a total crop of 234,568,000 bushels. Deducting 96,000,000 for seed and domestic use, and also exports already made or arranged for, there was still 55,116,000 bushels left.

Consider the supply provided by all other wheat growing countries and balance the whole with the world's imports—last year 524,000,000 bushels.

It looks as if we'd be lucky were to sell 200,000,000.

But we can't do that, and others may pull the peg and let it all go.

The Government and the wheat pools say, "Keep the price up."

We cannot sell at high prices because the supply by far exceeds the demand.

An increase in world consumption is not possible. For the increase in all wheat-eating countries is steadily falling.

And we can do little to help the market. The world's demand is greater proportionately than the Canadian wheat. To do this the Canadian Government would have to take a course in merchandising and secure the assistance of a first-class advertising agency.
